RAILROADS SEEK TO ADVANCE RATES FOR BOTH COAL AND COKE*Propose Five Per Cent. Increase in Spite of Recent Decisions.*OPERATORS WILLING TO FIGHT*Not Averse to Reopening the Case If It Means Opportunity to Gain Further Relief from Discrimination; What Railroads are Demanding.

Special to The Courier.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—The Connecticut coal producers and the Pittsburgh coke producers will probably have to defend their rates again before the Interstate Commerce Commission against the general advancement of 5 per cent. They will be quite willing to have the rate question brought up again in the event of any further further relief from discrimination, but it is doubtful whether they will be afforded such opportunity in this proceeding.

The eastern railroads, in filing their tariffs for advanced rates, included coal, coke and ore. Notwithstanding the decision in the case of the Connecticut Coal Producers Association, rendered May 29, stating that the adjustment of freight rates then made should prevail for two years.

This decision affected Eastern, Central, Cleveland, Toledo and Canton, C.
North, Cornwall, Hoboken, Philadelphia and Reading, Pa.; Newark, N. J., and Baltimore; but the rates to these points, along with others, have been embraced in those it is proposed to increase.

The following tables show the present rates on coke from the Connellsville region and are from Lake Erie docks to important centers and the proposed rates:

District	Present	Proposed
Valley	$1.20	$1.26
Cleveland	1.00	1.06
Toledo	1.00	1.06
Canton	1.00	1.06
Hoboken	1.00	1.06
Philadelphia	1.00	1.06
Reading	1.00	1.06
Newark	1.00	1.06
Baltimore	1.00	1.06
Washington	1.00	1.06
St. Louis	1.00	1.06
Chicago	1.00	1.06
St. Paul	1.00	1.06
Minneapolis	1.00	1.06
Portland	1.00	1.06
Boston	1.00	1.06
New York	1.00	1.06

Coal rates from the Pittsburgh district have been treated similarly. Instances may be given by citing the present rates to the Mahoning and Shenandoah valleys, which is 70 cents.
It is proposed to increase this rate to 75 cents. The Cleveland rate of 70 cents would be increased to 75 cents if the tariff becomes effective. It is stated that the new rates are being filed in order to give the coal producers, entering into the manufacture of pig iron, were not to be increased. Afterward, it was explained, the railroads "at the last minute" had decided to increase the rates on the products along with the increase on the products of the general advance, iron and steel products, of course, being in the list.

The proposed rates have been referred to as a "5 per cent advance." The term is entirely a misnomer. A general advance of 5 per cent, which is 31 or more have been increased 5 per cent, with allowance in most, but not in all instances for the decline, according to whether it was over or below one-half cent. In the case of the coal, coke and ore rates, so far as discovered, has the minimum of the proposed advance been lower than 5 cents.
An example of this is the proposed rate to the Pittsburgh and Wheeling districts.

Following the alternative order of the commission in the Pittsburgh Steel Company case that the Pittsburgh rate should be no higher than the Wheeling rate, the former was decreased from 50 cents and the latter increased from 40 cents to 45 cents. The proposed rate is 50 cents, an increase of 5 cents, rather than 5 per cent.

The new heavier district, which includes in addition to the Pennsylvania points, Mingo Junction and Stonewall, O., is given an increase from 70 to 75 cents. The Mahoning and Shenandoah valleys are advanced from 60 to 65 cents. Mingo Junction and Stonewall, formerly in the Wheeling district, were transferred to the heavier district with the 70 rate through action of the Wheeling & Lake Erie, which has concurred with other lines in the proposed increase.

The Mahoning and Shenandoah valley and coal rates were attacked by independent manufacturers of those valleys, and decisions pertaining to the rates are pending.

Because of the recent establishment of new ore rates to the Wheeling, Pittsburgh, Beaver, Johnstown and Homestead districts, it was not thought the railroads would propose advances, and in view of the decision in the Coke Producers case, which rates were reduced and the new rates were ordered to prevail for two years, it was believed that the railroads could not attempt to increase them.
It appears to be an open question whether such an increase would be in direct violation of the order. The general opinion prevails that it would and that the commission will not permit the idea to grant these increases.

It also seems improbable that the commission will allow the proposed

CHARLES C. GATES DIES ON HUNTING TRIP IN THE WEST*Millionaire Son of Finance Was Married in Uniontown a Few Years Ago.

Charles C. Gates, several times a millionaire and son of the late John W. Gates, died suddenly at a railroad station in Cody, Wyo., yesterday. It is said that overexertion during a hunting trip he had just completed was the cause.

Mr. Gates was well known in Uniontown. He married Miss Florence Elizabeth Hopwood, niece of Attorney H. B. Hopwood a few years ago, the ceremony being performed at the Hopwood home in Uniontown. Mr. and Mrs. Gates visited the Hopwood home last fall and recently the Hop-wood family visited them in New York.

Gates was frequently in the public eye, largely on a result of his extraordinary habits. He was a free spender and lavished time upon those who served him. He had a penchant for hiring special trains and liked to travel at top speed.

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Just as special trains and love of high speed and display marked the life of Charles C. Gates, so will they be conspicuous during the funeral when the body is brought home from Cody, Wyoming, where he died on board a special train. Though arrangements have not been completed, it is expected that the body will lie in state on Monday in the grand ball room of the Plaza Hotel, just as his father's did before him, and interment will probably be made in Woodlawn cemetery.

APPLES AND DOUGHNUTS*Teat Time Will be Given the Youngsters on Halloween.

With Halloween but two days off, the celebration committee did not appear for its meeting yesterday afternoon in the high school, and it was necessary to postpone it until tonight.
The sub-committee on illumination, finance, prizes and pursade, are working and the details of the celebration will be ready in due time.

It is planned to distribute apples and doughnuts to the school children, and to the children of the community, by having them line up and pass through the hall of the high school building, in the north entrance and out the south.

Prizes are to be awarded for the most beautiful display of apples, and an effort will be made to confine the celebration as much as possible to the high school and library grounds, making sort of a carnival of it.

THIEVES ROB CHURCH*Steals Offering Box From Altar on West Side.

A thief entered the St. John's Slavic Catholic Church at the West Side during the night and removed the offering box from the high altar. The box contained a few dollars, but the loss is not serious, as it had been emptied on Saturday.

The box was unsecured for the night, and the thief was left behind.
Entrance was gained through a rear door which had been unlocked, and Rev.
A. Dikora, the priest, believes that the thief was familiar with the interior of the church.

The priest issued a message and vestment on the altar had been disturbed, but none was taken. They were of considerable value to the congregation, but the thief did not attempt to realize on them.

POLICE ALERT*Note to Drivers Tell of Traffic Ordinance Violations.

An instance of the alertness with which the patrolmen are enforcing the traffic ordinance was furnished on Monday night. During the progress of the dinner given by the French Kory in honor of Harold M.
French of Pittsburgh, the speaker of honors at the opening of the Industrial Fair, the host received a note from the police informing him that his automobile had been standing outside longer than the law allowed. Borough Solicitor Fred D. Munson, who drew up the ordinance, was seen at the dinner, and he was promptly jailed.

As the banquet was about over when the note was received, the car was soon moved and the party of guests taken to the Armory for the formal opening of the exposition.

BUILDING APPROVED*Burgess House Type Final Ordinance Is Not Being Violated.

Burgess J. L. Evans and Chief Routler this morning inspected a frame building in course of construction by an Italian resident of the West Side, just across the Main street bridge, about which complaint was raised that it was being erected in violation of the ordinance prohibiting frame buildings inside the fire limit.

The Burgess decided to allow the owner to go ahead with the work as it was more in the nature of repairs than constructing a new building.

New Stamp Book.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—A postal stamp to be adopted shortly by the department will be a stamp-book, containing 24 one-cent and 24 two-cent stamps to sell for 75 cents.

Mitchell Day Observed.

HAZLETON, Pa., Oct. 29.—Mitchell Day was observed throughout the anthracite coal fields today in honor of John Mitchell, who led the miners to victory in 1902.

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES PLEDGE A BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION; STRONG TICKET SEEKS POPULAR ENDORSEMENT*Nominees are Men of Wide Experience and High Character; Campaign is for the Whole Ticket and Not for One Man; Success at the Polls Next Tuesday is Virtually Assured.

Prospects for Republican success in a municipal campaign were never brighter than this year. It is the consensus of opinion that the entire ticket, to be voted upon at large, will win at the polls next Tuesday. The strength of the ticket lies in the caliber of the men who have been chosen to head it. A stronger ticket was never nominated by the party. It is not a political ticket, nor one which politicians had a hand in choosing.
The candidates for mayor, controller and council are, without exception, men who have never been particularly interested in politics, or actively connected with a political organization. It is a ticket of business men who will give the city a business administration.

With perhaps one exception, these men did not seek their nominations.
The political honor was thrust upon them. Men who had the best interests of the community at heart urged them to accept the nominations. They agreed, upon the single condition that they would not be required to make an active canvass at the primary.

These men were nominated, and are before the people of Connellsville for election. J. G. Gorman went into the primaries and won, and the strongest evidence of good faith on the part of the other candidates is that they accepted the nomination of the party voters by giving Gorman the same hearty support accorded the others on the ticket.

The Republican ticket is not a one-man ticket. While the Democrats seem to have centered their fight upon the choice of their candidate for mayor, the Republican nominees are standing together, working one for the other and presenting a solid front. It is the most remarkable demonstration of political harmony the town has ever witnessed, and gives promise that if these men are elected they will work together for the good of the community.

Heading the ticket for mayor is J.
Fred Kurtz, one of the most successful young business men of the community. Mr. Kurtz has been actively engaged in business for years, and in matters that give him a splendid equipment to handle the problems he will face if elected. He began as a stenographer at the old Shlagerman flour back works and today is not only a successful coke operator, but he is also interested in a number of other business industries. Not the least of his experiences was his connection for several years with the Connellsville Construction Company as its secretary. He gained a knowledge of the building business and its allied interests that will prove valuable to the community.

It was as Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce that Mr. Kurtz came most prominently before the public.
He took charge of the organization when it was reconstituted some years ago, and made it a live wire. The Chamber of Commerce accomplished more while Kurtz was its secretary than it has ever done before or since.
Not only did the Chamber of Commerce, largely because of Mr.
Kurtz's activities, bring several industries to Connellsville, including the Hapley Glass plant, the Connellsville Mica and the Keystone Tube Works, but it took an interest in civic affairs. The band stand, let it be known, was Mr. Kurtz's idea, and to him is the community mostly indebted for the popular concerts of the past three summers.

Frank W. Wright, one of the candidates for council, is an experienced business man. He is president of the Wright-Metzler Company which operates department stores in Connellsville and Uniontown. They are considered to be the best stores in this section of the state. Mr. Wright has been located in Connellsville ever since the company opened its store in a single room in the First National bank building. It now occupies three floors and the basement of the same structure. Mr. Wright has been a useful citizen to the community and always active in its behalf. He has never before entered politics, although he takes the interest a good citizen should take in political affairs. No man stands higher in popular esteem than Frank W. Wright.

Thomas J. Hooper, the West Side representative on the ticket, has served in the New Haven Town Council. He is a successful shoe merchant, and is a senior partner in the firm of Hooper & Long. His rise from a clerk with the firm of Johnson & Norris to his present position, within a comparatively short time, is sufficient testimony as to his business ability. As a good citizen, no man ranks higher.

John L. Gorman is splendidly equipped to serve as a councilman. He has had a long experience in business, and has been a member of the Connellsville Board of Trade. He is a civil and mining engineer, expert accountant and all-around business man. He has also gained considerable special knowledge in regard to municipal government. His connection with the old Electric Company and other public utility ventures has given him a practical knowledge of the public utility problems such as the municipal water supply, and is especially qualified to fill the position to which he is appointed. He is popular, and has a strong following among the younger element of the voting population. He is the West Side's second representative on the ticket.

BIG SEASON OF GRAND OPERA IS PROMISED HERE THIS YEAR*Three Different Companies are Booked at the Suburban Theatre.

The greatest season of grand opera that Connellsville has ever enjoyed is predicted by Manager Fred Robbins of the Suburban Theatre. No less than three big operatic attractions have been booked to appear at his house. The first of these will be the spectacular production of Mosca's "Hedraide," the story of Salome, by a company of 100 persons. There will be an orchestra of 25 pieces, which will be the first two rows of chairs downstairs. "Hedraide" will appear on November 11.

On December 13 the original Hosen Grand Opera Company will play here, on its second annual tour "I spread the gospel of grand opera." This company will sing "Cavallone Rondeau." This is a short opera.
It will be preceded by a concert in which the stars will sing the sextet from "Lacra," the quartet from "Lillolo," and other songs, and ensembles from seven other operas.

On January 5 the Opera Grand Company will also give its annual appearance presenting on this occasion "Phaetone's" "Climes of Normandy." This is one of the lighter operas and is certain to prove popular.

Every one of the candidates on the ticket to be voted upon by the voters at large is absolutely independent of any political machine. Their nominations were not dictated. They are under no obligations to any personal interests in or out of politics. They have no ulterior motives, and are most valuable.

ARRESTED FOR FIGHTING.*Maud Allen, Colored, Pays Court in Assault Charge.

Maud Allen, the colored woman who was locked up on Sunday for disorderly conduct, was back in the city hall again this morning having been sentenced to a term of 30 days in the house of correction for assault and battery. The case was set for trial last night with a blood nose and a discolored eye, which she attributed to a beating inflicted by Mrs. Allen.
The case was settled before Judge Buttner, the defendant paying the costs.

PENNA. MINING MAN DODGES DEATH IN NEW MEXICO MINE*Writes State Inspector Telling of Disaster Which Cost Hundreds of Lives.

Special to The Courier.
SOMERSET, Oct. 29.—State Inspector Fletcher W. Cunningham of Somerset, yesterday received a letter from W. H. James of Dawson, New Mexico, who was formerly a mine foreman in Pennsylvania. He went to New Mexico several years ago on account of his health. When Inspector Cunningham was located at Wilkes-Barre, Mr. James was mine foreman at Duquesne and Plum Creek for the New York & Cleveland Gas Coal Company. Mr. James was recently a candidate for chief of the Department of Mines in New Mexico.
According to Mr. James, the explosion was caused by a small quantity of gas which, when ignited, exploded the dust with which the mine was filled.
His letter to Inspector Cunningham follows:

"You no doubt heard of our accident. I escaped by being only a minute too late on my way to work in the mine. Up till today (Saturday) there are 265 known dead, 11 walked out, 9 taken out alive, and 45 dead taken out at this writing. Pans were out of service about four hours after the explosion. The mine is now clear of fire so far as is known. I think the explosion was caused by a small quantity of gas ignited by plenty of dust."

"I am now lying in bed. I have just had three hours sleep after working 29 hours, and will again report for duty in a few hours. Two helmet men were lost Friday night. They were over-anxious, it is said, in their efforts to locate more living miners.
We are well equipped for rescue work. There are other mines here, but they are not connected with the one in which the accident occurred.
The mine is now in very bad condition. Numerous falls of roof destroyed ventilation. The main entries are open. Before the explosion the condition of the mine was fair, with the exception of considerable dust."

BARBERS GET 10-HOUR DAY*Proprietors Meet the Demands of the Journeyman and Adjust Conditions.

The journeymen barbers of town will enjoy a 10-hour working day after November 10, an agreement having been reached to this effect between the Connellsville Master Barbers' Association and the International Journeymen Barbers' Union No. 712.

Effective November 10 the barber shops of town will be open from 7:30 A. M. until 7:30 P. M., with the exception of Saturday, when they will remain open until 10 o'clock in the evening.

In order to give their employees the 10-hour day, the master barbers will give their employees a half day of each week to make up for the extra time put in on Saturdays.

About 25 barber shops have made this agreement, only one or two of the smaller ones staying out.

MINING MAN DIES*Edward Shaffer Was Assistant Superintendent for Consolidation Co.

Special to The Courier.
SOMERSET, Oct. 29.—Edward Shaffer, aged 32, died at his home in Somerset township, three miles west of Somerset, Monday night from pneumonia. He was formerly assistant superintendent of the Consolidation Coal Company's mines at Acosta, this county, removing to his farm here last year. He was a son of J. S.
Shaffer, of Somerset, and Mrs. John S.
Shaffer, of Somerset.

CRIPPLE RELEASED.*Goes From Lockup to the Hospital for Treatment.

Elmer Young, the cripple who smashed a car, was released from the jail this morning for a medical examination at the State Hospital. He was released this morning, but he was unable to leave the city hall because the stamp of his legs had become so sore as to make it impossible for him to move.

Burgess Evans arranged to have him taken to the Cottage State Hospital for treatment.

PAYS, BUT IS HELD.*Friends Settle Fine, But DeMarko Must Answer Another Charge.

Tony DeMarko was arrested on West Grape alley last night and when searched in the police station was found to have a big revolver in his pocket.

When arraigned this morning two felony charges were laid against him.
The first was for carrying a dangerous weapon, but he was sent back to await a hearing on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

Morgantown High Coming.

Principal H. B. Smith of the High School has arranged a game with Morgantown High School for Fayette town played Uniontown earlier in the season and was defeated 7-6.

On Hunting Trip.

Dr. G. W. Newcomer and Dave Lott left this morning for a several days hunting trip near Sugar Land.

dog and expects to bag a nice lot of game.

MOTORCYCLIST ASKS $10,000 FOR INJURIES
WHEN HIT BY AN AUTO*Pratt Declares That Chaut-four for Swaney Turned Wrong to Left.*CRASHED ON MERRITTSTOWN ROAD*Damage Suit Is Started in Uniontown growing Out of Accident on June 11, 1911. Exceptions are Filed to Pre-emption of Citizen's Ticket.

Special to The Courier.
UNIONTOWN, Oct. 29.—The trial of the $10,000 damage suit of William B. Pratt against George W. Swaney was started in civil court today.
Swaney claims damages because of a collision on the Merrittstown road, near the National Pike, on June 11, 1911, in which he claims to have been permanently injured.

Pratt alleges that he was riding a motorcycle when he met the Swaney automobile, driven by Eugene Aurich, and that he turned to the right to pass. He insists that Aurich turned to the left, causing a collision of the machines. Pratt says he had a leg crushed and was otherwise injured.
In addition to the $10,000 damages he seeks, he also asks $500 to settle the hospital and physician's bills, and $15 for damage done to the motorcycle.

Margaret Adams has entered suit for $10,000 against William Brown of Uniontown, alleging breach of promise. Mrs. Adams alleges that she not only loaned Brown money, but purchased, with her own money and at his request, articles of clothing for his use. The plaintiff is the divorced wife of Charles Adams, and is 22 years old. Brown is alleged to be wealthy.

Judge Van Swearingen today heard arguments in the exceptions filed to the preemption of the Citizen party's name, alleging it to have been illegal.
Decision was reserved.

Albert Staders yesterday brought suit against the Taylor Coal & Coke Company to recover $5,000 damages for injuries alleged to have been received as the result of working about a defective coke oven.

Suit was also brought by W. F.
Ford to recover $250 on a promissory note alleged to have been made to the order of A. J. Cochran of Dawson.

The Hazlet Coal & Coke Company was sued for $522.52 by John Zebby.
It is alleged the company failed to honour store orders.

In the suit of F. T. Adams against the Monmouth Farmers' Exchange, stayed at the police station early last evening and asked for a night's the basement to which transient guests are always welcomed, but as they were about to descend into this subterranean cavern one of them inquired what time supper would be served.

They were told politely but firmly that the city did not include supper disappointed the entire gang left with the passing information that "we have money for a good bed and sup-

BUILT RIGHT

Stomach, Nerves and Thinner Restored by Grape-Nuts Food.

The number of persons whose ailments were such that no other food could be retained at all in large and reports are on the increase.

For 12 years I suffered from dyspepsia, finding food that did not distress me," writes a Wis. lady. "I was reduced from 145 to 90 lbs., gradually growing weaker until I could leave my bed only a short while at a time, and became unable to speak aloud."

Three years ago I was attracted by an article on Grape-Nuts and decided to try it.

"My stomach was so weak I could not take cream, but I used Grape-Nuts with milk and lime water. It helped me from the first, building up my system in a manner most astonishing to the friends who had thought my recovery impossible."

"Soon I was able to take Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast and lunch at night, with an egg and Grape-Nuts for dinner."

"I am now able to eat fruit, meat and nearly all vegetables for dinner, but I still continue Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper."

"At the time of beginning Grape-Nuts I could scarcely speak a sentence without choking, was around me 'talking crooked' in some way but I have become so strengthened that I no longer have that trouble." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There is a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Well-Being," in plain.

FASCINATING DAINTESS.

There has appeared a new design for a dainty lingerie set, the corset-cover and petticoat of which have been sketched here. These were made of fine madras. The same design has been kept in mind for both articles and cleverly adapted to both.

In the corset-cover the waist line in which the insertion of lace has been inset is made to follow the scallops of the embroidery which finished the corset line. The panel of insertion of the skirt flounces fills the front of the cover. Both corset-cover and petticoat are made in both garments to be worn under modish gowns. Even the skirt ruffle has been bewitched and becomes a flat knife pleating.

What GOOD ROADS Did for One Man.

A Uniontown man traveling one day this summer over the recently completed State Road between Ligonier and Bedford Springs stopped to call on a friend who owned a farm in the mountains of Somerset county. During the conversation the farmer told him that he had just refused an offer from a Pittsburgh man of $75.00 an acre for his farm. Knowing that he had only asked $37.50 an acre for his place the summer before, the Uniontown man asked him why he didn't sell. "Because," said the farmer, "since the State Road has been completed I think I will be able to get $100 for it."

Good roads bring country people to town to buy goods, and city people to the country to buy farms.

"But they cost too much when the State builds them" is the excuse the "antis" give for being against the fifty million dollar Good Roads Bond issue. Well, perhaps they do. Everyone knows that it costs the State, County, or Borough more to do work than it does a private individual. But even if good roads are expensive we want them anyhow, especially if they don't cost US anything. The State has already improved half of the National Pike in Fayette county, yet it didn't cost you a cent.

There is no good reason why everyone should not vote for the amendment to the Constitution authorizing the State to issue fifty million dollars of bonds for the purpose of building good roads. The opposition seems to be largely political. You know the "outs," the fellows that are out of office, always think they must be against everything that the fellows in office are in favor of. But in a great movement such as the building of good roads, party politics should be forgotten and everyone should put his shoulder to the wheel and push.

Brother, don't be a clam! Don't let them pull the wool over YOUR eyes. How do the great railways of the country build their roads? By issuing bonds. How does the West Penn Street Railway get the money to build their lines? By issuing bonds. How do the Boroughs get the money to pave their streets? By issuing bonds.

It's the way every great enterprise is financed. It's the way for us to build our roads.

Listen! State taxes are raised almost entirely from the tax on the capital stock of corporations and from the tax on money at interest. Those taxes are fixed and have to be paid anyhow. Anything you get back from the State in the way of good roads is just that much gained.

STEEL TRADE HURON.

The iron and steel trade is not an Italian prospect, but it is evident that manufacturers are determined to make the most of the situation, and to be as cheerful as possible about it. At a gathering in Chicago this week they even joked about it.

Joseph O. Butler, Jr., Vice President of the H. H. Steel Company, said that President Wilson opened the Panama Canal by pushing a button, but expressed the hope that the President would "let up on some other thing he's pushing."

John A. Topping, Chairman of the Republic Iron & Steel Company, feared they might be facing a change of base in the steel industry. "Heretofore," he said, "it has been Pittsburgh, but we may have to take a transfer to Antwerp."

William A. Rogers, President of the Rogers-Brown company, summed up thus: "The steel industry, confronted by overproduction, by lack of building activity among the nations, by the prospect of unpleasant legislation by the tariff law, and the Currency bill, is in a state of suspended animation. I am conscious, however, of a stirring of optimism that may revive it. I believe it is only a question of time when the turn of the tide will come that will sweep away all these obstacles to progress. Anyway, we have met the tariff and it is ours. Perhaps I am like the man I used to know who one day dropped into a test pit. He fell 60 feet, and then clutched at the side of a girder. He clung to the girder as long as he could. Then he made his peace with heaven, and his progress and dropped. He fell just six inches."

Charles M. Schwab declared that he dreamed a dream. He dreamed that Jim Campbell, President of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company, was sitting in his office when a man came in from the sales department and said: "Bill Smith, our prize sales man, is dead. What shall we do about it?" "Do," said Campbell. "What do you suppose you ought to do about it?" Search the pockets of the corpse and see if he has any orders." The dreamer declared that there next appeared before him a vision of George W. Perkins. George was evidently happy. He wore a smile and carried a banner with the legend, "United States of America for me. Back to the good old Republican party."

George W. Perkins didn't have any dreams, but he had a lot of grievances, and one of them was the lack of statement in the country. On this point he very pointedly said: "However, if we are dissatisfied with legislation, we are getting only what we are entitled to. For years we have been going on paying no attention to public affairs. The result has been what we might have expected. If all the officeholders in the United States were to lose their jobs tomorrow and should apply to you for positions, you wouldn't find 10% of them who could qualify for jobs worth $1,200 a year." If the slump in the Connelville coke trade this week is any sign of steel trade conditions, it is no wonder the captains of industry are whistling to keep their courage up.

FARMY TALK.

Our esteemed but unimpaired contemporary, The News, is naughtily again. It has always been rather careless about the truth, especially in politics, but in the pending city campaign it has become utterly reckless in its statements concerning men and their characters. The enduring reputation achieved by Annulus was that of a clever provocateur. The fame of a stupid liar would have been forgotten.

The attempts of the Democratic organ to vilify the Republican candidates having failed, it is now devoting its time to decorating the political horizon with pictures of imaginary meetings between H. M. Kephart, Frank Friel and J. Fred Kurtz, and in trying to persuade the public that the election of the Republican ticket means the absolute domination of borsini in its most obnoxious form. In bold and black type it propounds this terrible question, "Do we want Harmon M. Kephart for Mayor of Connelville?"

The meetings announced between the parties mentioned never took place, a fact which The News is compelled to admit. If it kept right on telling the truth it would admit further that there is not the slightest danger of the coming Republican administration being housed by anybody, nor of Harmon M. Kephart being Mayor of Connelville.

In this connection attention is directed to the fact that The News does not ask whether the citizens of Connelville want Harmon M. Kephart for Mayor, but whether "we," presumably meaning The News itself, or at most the Democratic party of Connelville, want him.

Of course they do not want Harmon M. Kephart. He is a Republican. He is also a business man of ability and character. He has been active in politics, it is true, but that is not necessarily a crime, and it is certain that Harmon has never been convicted of it. Harmon is not running for Mayor this time, but if he were we would be willing to wager something handsome that he would win, and something handsome that his administration would be a credit to himself and the town; and, finally, we would bet our boots that the city would stay Republican as long as Harmon was Mayor.

It is hardly necessary for us to say that the character of the Republican nominees is a sufficient guarantee in the event of their election of the entire independence of the Republican administration, will at all times be open to conviction, but it will take orders from nobody. Conviction will be its guide and the welfare of the people its first consideration.

State money is no good in the Municipal Court where the performance is real.

ASSISTANCE.

"If any voter declares to the judge of election that by reason of any disability he desires assistance in the preparation of his ballot, he shall be permitted by the judge of election to select a qualified voter of the election district to aid him in the preparation of his ballot, such preparation being made in the voting compartment."

This is a law under which a complainant election board permits the wholesale delivery of purchased votes on election day. The agent of the buyer accompanies the bought voter to the booth and marks his ticket. The voter then accompanies the agent outside and receives the wages of his infamy. It is currently reported that preparations are being made on an extensive scale to purchase and deliver the floating vote in Connelville on Tuesday next. Those who may consider the buying or selling this sort of merchandise will do so at their peril.

Reputable and substantial citizens of Connelville are determined that its city election shall be as fair and unimpaired as the good names of most of its municipal candidates, and to that end they have taken practical steps to prosecute all such offenses against the election law which may be perpetrated or attempted next Tuesday.

Connelville is a building and loan association town, which means that it is a thrifty and growing town. A town that is neither thrifty nor growing has no use for building and loan associations.

NEWS OF A DAY AS GATHERED UP ABOUT SCOTSDALE

Methodists Plan Old Home Week With Former Pastors.

ARE TO PREACH EACH EVENING

Anniversary of Dedication of Present Building Will Be the Starting Time; Autists Make Good Trip; Bible Conference Opens; Other Notes.

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, Oct. 29.—Beginning on Sunday and lasting until Friday, November 1, the pastor and people of the First Methodist Episcopal Church have planned an Old Home Week, which they expect to be very enjoyable. November 2 is the anniversary of the dedication of the present building. Rev. H. M. Piper, the pastor, announces that the work will be just what the name denotes. A time when all the members who were once with the congregation shall come home, and the former pastors are to return and preach from their old pulpit. He continues that the week has another significance, which is that it will be during the services, "a time when those who have been wandering away from their church home in youth and immaturity may come back and take their place in the circle of friendship and upon the line of duty."

On Sunday, November 2, the preacher will be Rev. H. M. Piper, of New Kensington. Monday, November 3, to Rev. H. M. Piper, of C. Weaver, Beaver Falls. Tuesday evening, November 4, Rev. H. M. Piper, of Kittanning. Wednesday, November 5, Rev. A. J. Allen, of Canonsburg. On Thursday, November 6, will be the men's banquet, with Harry A.
Dunlap and others as speakers, and on Friday, November 7, Rev. W. S.
Lockard of Pittsburgh, a former Scottdale boy.

It is hoped by the pastor that arrangements can be made to have Rev.
C. L. E. Carver, of Pittsburg, Pa., of the Creek with the ministers. As these ministers while with this congregation have doubtless won many friends among those of the town and vicinity whose friendship as such is appreciated by the present pastor. The latter extends a hearty welcome to all these services and to come with kindness to the returning ministers.

FROM THIRP.
Mr. and Mrs. Walter Loucks of the Tenneco Motor Company, have arrived home from a trip to Washington, Baltimore, New York, Philadelphia, and Atlantic City. They travelled 1,500 miles and did not have even a puncture during the trip, although they encountered some rough roads.
THEIR EXPERIENCE.

The Bible conference, under the auspices of an inter-denominational committee organized in the Methodist Episcopal Church Tuesday evening with a large attendance. The feature is by Rev. Lewis S. Chater, who was here a year ago. Reverend Mr.
Chater is now residing in his wife and they will stay at the service as they did last year. Rev. Mr. Chater will hold meetings at 7:30 o'clock each evening including Saturday and meetings at 3 o'clock on afternoon including Sunday. The subject of the afternoon meetings will be "What Constitutes a Truly Spiritual Person." The evening meetings are alone the study of effective evangelism and personal work.

KILL CATARRH GERM USE BOOTH'S HYOMEL

Try the sure and most effective way to reach the raw, tender, inflamed mucous membrane, infested with cattarrh germs—breathe Hyomel. All druggists sell it.

You cannot reach the nooks and crannies of the breathing organs with liquid preparations; there is only one way—breathe a few times daily the germ-destroying air of Booth's Hyo-mel. It acts directly on the inflamed membranes and destroys the catarrhal germs.

If you suffer from offensive breath, coughing, frequent sneezing, husky voice, discharge from the nose, droppings in the throat, spasmodic coughing or any other symptoms of catarrh, use Hyomel at once. It will destroy the disease germs in the nose, throat and lungs, and give quick and permanent relief, or money refunded by A. A. Clarke, druggist, Connelsville.

The complete outfit including pocket inhaler and bottle of liquid costs $1.00, extra bottles of liquid if later needed, 50 cents.—Adv.

TOBACCO.

By GEORGE FITCH.

Author of "At Good Old Swash."

Tobacco is a weed which is raised at great care and expense in the night-riding portions of the United States and elsewhere, and is totally consumed by the later on, there being no insurance.

In fact three-quarters of the arsenic in the world is committed upon tobacco. Every day a million dollars of tobacco goes up in smoke, and yet no effort is made to treat it with asbestos or to make it drop out in any particular. Many substitutes for tobacco are often used, such as rope, cabbage, excelsior, tar paper, jute, bagging and twine, but unfortunately the substitutes burn as readily as the tobacco.

In fact, this is even more unfortunate than the inflammability of tobacco itself.

Tobacco is grown in the warm sunshine and consists of large bunches of flat, broad leaves which absorb the hot sunshine and convert it into nicotine, a deadly poison which is said to be able to kill a man at forty paces, if it entered the blood. The tobacco is if it cured to which the tobacco is it is chopped off and dried in bunches, after which it is made into cigars, torches, fumigators, plug cuttles, cigarettes, snuff and other contagious articles.

Tobacco was first used by the Indians and was discovered by Sir Walter Raleigh who made snuggers out of it and used them to divert his mind from his carelessness on his way back to England. When Sir Walter Raleigh on his first cigar in England and began blowing double rings of dense smoke through his mouth and nose and carried his servant threw a ball of water over him and called out the fire department. This method of breaking the cigar habit is not in vogue today.

Tobacco can be smoked, chewed, inhaled or eaten and causes dangerous effects upon those who do not use it. Most boys learn the use of tobacco at the age of ten and continue until their fathers discover the fact —after which they discontinue the custom until they are too large to

"I have listened to her confession," said Rosalie calmly. "She told the police—after she signed that paper—how you went into Captain Hanaka's room at night to get your family jewels, how that trick alarm on his strong-box woke him up, and how you killed him."

"But Juan Estrilla had leaped up now as though his nerves would be denied no longer."

"You are here to betray me—I know now!" he said.

"I suspected this trouble was coming," replied Rosalie Le Grange. "I sent Miss Lane to deliver you here at five o'clock—because it is an out-of-the-way place and quiet. Sit down."

Estrilla shook as he resumed his seat.

"Does she know?" he asked.

"Not yet," said Rosalie.

"I didn't give her my real reason. I was glad," she pursued, "to hear you burst out in that sincere way when I said you killed Hanaka. I put that in for a test; and you stood it. Now sit there and listen to what else your sister said, and see if any of that could have been worked out by detectives. She says you didn't kill Hanaka, that he died of apoplexy and fell on the knife you was holding against him."

Estrilla turned his great eyes and moistened his lips as though to speak; but he held to his nerve and made no sound.

"She says that you carried out that box of jewels with the cover open, and that a diamond buckle dropped out as you were passing through the door. And when she came back in your clothes after you telephoned to her, she picked it up. The jewels are in Caracas. You dropped the box in the river. Could anybody patch that together? Could anybody guess that?"

"Then if he died of apoplexy—if I didn't kill him—why should they arrest me?" asked Estrilla.

"Young man," said Rosalie, "how could you prove it?"

Unconsciously and directly, Estrilla came out with what amounted to his confession.

"He was always in danger of apoplexy," he said. "And I don't know if it was a mortal seizure. For his hands were going toward his head, not toward the knife. Even when he fell and died, his hands were still going up, not down. I have seen doctors. I have read about apoplexy in every medical book in the public library. And when I saw him last—there was blood on his necktie."

Rosalie nodded.

"I saw that, too. My, but coroner's physicians are dense!" she said. "Now I've got to talk hard and straight. You were in the act of burglary. It doesn't make no difference that you had a right to burglarize—no jury could recognize that. The coroner's physician never thought of anything but that stab wound—never thought of looking for apoplexy—can't seem to plain. You are the only people who thought about that bloody nose. The body's crumpled, and if it wasn't—well, we won't go into that. Why Juan Perez, they'd laugh at you. Do you see? Don't you get your fist?"

He was trembling, and now he made a slight movement with his hands as though to steady his head.

"So you must get away!"

"But my sister—"

"Now hold on to yourself. I've got to talk awful to make you see this thing. She didn't kill him—she couldn't. Anybody could see that. A sick little thing like her hasn't the power in her to drive such a knife into a big man who's standing on his feet. No jury would swallow it. She's accessory or something—but you can bet, Mr. Juan Perez, that an American jury ain't going to give a verdict against a sick little woman who's an accessory because she's standing by her brother. They may do that in English countries, but not here. And which do you think would be better for your sister—to go to jail until her trial, or to wait by the gate of Sing Sing and take you away some morning all dead and floppy after you'd had ten thousand volts of electricity switched into your spinal column?"

Estrilla was on his feet now, in a crisis of nerves. His eyes closed and opened to a set stare.

"I thought you'd see it," said Rosalie. "I won't keep you in suspense any longer. You're going to get away. An' I've fixed it. Look at this—here, take it!" she pulled a small paper from her pocket, handed it to Estrilla. It shook in his hands as he read.

"A seaman's paper," he said at length.

"For Antonio Cogli, an Italian sailor, signed for the schooner Maud. He fell down a hatch this morning and broke his leg. An' he can't go. You're ship pin' as him. I've fixed it. The Captain don't know who you are. He only knows that he's got a man who must beat it out of the country—an' he'll do anything for me. He lands at Hall's. He'll fix it for you to get to the next place—wherever that may be. I'm going to write him at Hall's and vlain' him about that. An' you're to tell him, so he can tell me, so I can tell your sister, where you've gone. Got my money on you?"

"That First Gang Plank," She Said.

face and motion now. He looked out on the soiled rows of West Side apartment-houses, and dropped for a second into Spanish.

"Sanjurjo de Dios!" he said, "how I shall always hate New York!"

They were drawing up at the elevated.

"Remember how to get there?" she whispered before she opened the door.

"Sure? Go ahead an' take the first train. I'll follow on the next. Walk slow after you get off. I'll walk fast—neither of us wants to loiter on that plank."

If Estrilla hoped that he would hear further clearance of these mysteries at the dock, he was disappointed. As he passed the gate, Rosalie shot from under shadow of a truck. He glanced to right and left. None of the roué-abouts was looking or listening.

"That first gangplank," she said. "The Captain's aboard expectin' you. Just say to him, 'I'm Corri.' He knows the rest. You'll change clothes in his cabin. He'll keep you at work until you sail at daylight. Go—don't thank me—go—I'm sure you'll see your sister in a year or two. Go."

Now for the first time in his dialogue with him, Estrilla entered her voice. "An' God be good to you!" she said. She turned him almost roughly.

"One moment," he said; "my love to my sister—oh, take care of her." His voice grew lighter, then, and he almost smiled. "And tell Miss Lane for me that she is beautiful and good!"

He walked away. When a second later, he glanced back over his shoulder, she was making a rapid pace toward the dock-gate.

Rosalie passed the shadow of the plank, and gained sight of the Maud's deck. She saw Estrilla go aboard, saw Captain Baldwin meet him, saw them enter the cabin together. She waited no longer.

That was a day of heavy personal expense for Rosalie. Two blocks away she took another taxicab. This time she hesitated a moment before she gave the driver his directions.

"Hotel Cynara, Brooklyn, first, I guess."

After a time, she began talking under her breath again—repeating her last phrase to Estrilla.

"God be good to you—God or somebody will have to be awful good to me, now. Well, there's one relief in feature, he won't break his heart over Betsy-Barbara. It was only a distraction with him, after all. I wonder what they're made of inside—those high-class dagoes!"

CHAPTER XIX.

When Dimples Wm. Inspector Martin McGee, as one who must do something, so matter how to

to get the truth is to hear it now. The minute anybody else comes into that door—I close my face. Take your hand away from there. Sit down!"

His good sense reassured itself; he obeyed. But still his face was red and hard. Then—though Inspector McGee was some minutes in noting it consciously—a change crossed the countenance of Rosalie Le Grange. Little by little, the life came back. One by one, the lights of her began twinkling in mouth and chin and dimples. And she spoke:

"Martin McGee, you're free to look for that Perez man wherever you want. You won't get him. You'd stand a chance if you had just him on the other side. But you've got me, too. An' you know me! Now, listen. Maybe this is the last talk we'll ever have together, an' I want to put it straight. You're out to send that boy to the electric chair, just like you'd send a piece of stove wood to be burned up in the fire. You ain't thinkin' about anything else. I know how you and the District Attorney would put it to the jury. He was committin' burglary—he stabbed his man—he's a dingo with no pull—that talk about apoplexy is to laugh. But I ask you private—do you think he deserves it?"

"Well, that's the law, ain't it?" growled McGee. "That's what I'm here for."

Rosalie's heart gave a little jump. But she controlled her expression. He was willing to argue the case—the first skirmish was won.

"The law!" exclaimed Rosalie. "That for your law! Golly, I could carry a 'Votes for Women' banner when I think about it! You men have been makin' the law all these years. An' you've run it on rules—pothin' but rules. Diagrams. Did he do it? All right, hang him. You can't look at things except on the outside. I wish you did have a few women to look at 'em inside an' out. Once in a while one of your cussed jurin' uses its common sense an' lets a man go when the police evidence is against him. But they don't do it themselves. No, sir! It's their mothers in 'em."

"That will do," snarled McGee; "this suffragette dope has nothing to do with the case. Where's Perez?"

"Now this Perez," pursued Rosalie, treating the Inspector's answer as though it had not been said, "was a darn fool—worst fool I ever saw—as those of a little men generally are. But what was he doin' when Hanaka died? Gettin' his own from a crook, the property that belonged to him, in the only way he knew. Suppose it's true he killed Captain Hanaka—did you ever see a man that deserved killin' more? Besides, he didn't."

"You aren't swallowin' that yarn about apoplexy, are you?" asked Inspector McGee.

"In the first place," said Rosalie, "who knows Margarita Perez better, who that pumped her yesterday afternoon or me that watched her for a month? Me that heard her talk her soul out to her mother an' her lover? I tell you, she told the truth."

"Yes, and how did she know he died of apoplexy? She wasn't there—"

"She didn't know except on hearsay. But I do."

"Because, Martin McGee, just because. You know Cleary—I don't mean the sergeant, I mean the Coroner's physician that made the Hanaka autopsy. There's some Coroner's doctors I'd trust my life with as soon as any, but Cleary—political appointment you know. Do you think that Cleary, when he bandaged him over a man stabbed in the heart, looked any further into the cause? I'm betting, though, that even Cleary must have meant one thing which would have meant something to anybody but a political doctor. I saw it that night. And this Perez—Estrilla—follow saw it."

"Oh, you've talked to him then?"

"That'll come in later—it you're still listenin' to me. Well, before he knew what I know, this Estrilla told me that Captain Hanaka, after he fell, was bleeding at the nose. I'd seen that, too—when I came into the house ahead of the doctor. Now hear the thing to do," she added. "You call up that Dr. Cleary right now. You see if he didn't notice it an' just walk away from it—"

Inspector McGee, with the air of one who punctures hubbub, opened his telephone.

"Spring double O," he said; and then to Rosalie: "You can listen on the extension if you want to." His voice was formal, and he averted his eyes.

"Dr. Cleary?" inquired the Inspector. "Inspector McGee. Doctor have you your notes on the Hanaka case? The autopsy I mean. In your pocket notebook? Well, just one little thing. Did you find any blood on the nostrils?"

"Here's the record," came back Dr. Cleary's voice after a half-minute; "slight bleeding from the nostril caused probably by the fall—"

"That will do," said McGee—"wait a second—you didn't perform any autopsy on his head? You didn't look into his brain?"

"What was the use?" came back Cleary's voice, a little defiantly. "He was stabbed in the heart, wasn't he?"

"Now who's lyin'?" said Rosalie Le Grange, as she hung up the telephone. But there was still a snarl in McGee's voice as he spoke:

"You think you can monkey with the law? You think you can sit crooked loose just as you please and get away with it? It's all very well for you, but look at the fix you're leaving for me. The Hanaka case is cleared up. Wade is innocent. We've had the wrong man all the time. That's joke enough on us. But when we find the right one, he gives us the slip. The Big Commissioner will get roasted by the papers and hand it to the Deputy Comish, and the Deputy will pass the buck down to me, and I'll have to report how it happened. Yes, and I will, too! He burst out. "I'll tell all right! Convinced at last. You know what that means?"

The Stage and The Players.

A Scene from "The Sins of the Fathers."

"Is it a felony or a misdemeanor?" asked Rosalie. "I sort of forgot which it was at the time I committed it."

"Look here," said McGee, "you can't bluff me."

"I know I can't," said Rosalie, "an' you can't me, either."

"Come, out with it then—what have you done and why did you do it?"

"As for what I've done," said Rosalie, "telling you would be spoiling it. Why did I do it? I've answered that. I couldn't trust you or any man alive to let that poor boy off. Apoplexy? You asserted when his sister said it, an' you'd be scornin' now if you had him here in front of you. They'd laugh him to the chair. I've saved you the necessity of killin' an innocent man. An' I ought to be thanked, not kicked."

"You'll get worse," said Martin McGee; "you'll go up—that's what will happen to you!"

"Now will I," mocked Rosalie, breaking out her dimples, full-blown, for the first time in two days. "What an awful trick on a lady! Especially when you'll have to do it yourself. You're the only witness—the only person who knows that I promised to deliver Estrilla. You're the only person that's heard me confess I let him get away. So you'll be put on the witness-stand, an' then I'll be put on the stand. An' I'll testify how the New York police were baffled with the real criminals passin' right under their noses twenty times a day, an' how a poor boardin'-house keeper that used to be a medium—just a plain, good old soul—took a hairpin an' a thimbleful of common sense an' got a confession an' made you all fools. My lawyer'll get it up; an' if he don't, the papers will, because I'll tell 'em."

"Marty McGee," she added, "let's get down to cases. You can't do a thing to me that'll help your position at all. I'll go to jail for life an' never tell where Juan Perez has gone. But if you'll listen, I'll show you just how to fix this without trouble for anybody."

Inspector McGee was now playing with a flexible paper-knife, his downcast eyes fixed upon it as he twisted it back and forth.

"How?" he asked in a voice from which the bluster had gone.

Rosalie established herself comfortably in her chair.

THE SOISSON.

"THE SINS OF THE FATHERS" TONIGHT! "The Sins of the Fathers" will be presented at the Soisson Theatre this afternoon and tonight. It is a true and vivid picture of the south. Mr. Dixon, the author, wrote the first manuscript of the powerful drama in ten days. He was at work on one of his novels when the inspiration struck him. He stopped work on the novel and for ten days and nights wrote. "The whole play came to him so clearly that the first rough draft and the finished manuscript were almost word for word. The play is Mr. Dixon's best dramatic work and in it herself famous through her acting for the big moving picture film companies. The piece is said to contain an exceedingly human story in which the comedy element predominates, but little sharp tugs at the heart strings every now and then bring forth the human interest. The story of the play tells of a child-hating bachelor, being suddenly made the guardian of his orphaned niece, and tells how this little one, twice herself around this "child hater," until he is willing to give up everything to have the baby restored to his home.

"THE SPENDTHRIFT."

On Saturday matinee and evening, November 1, we will have the pleas-Henry Buckler and Baby Mimi Yvonne.

He has succeeded in interweaving tragedy and comedy so masterfully that the audience is carried away by the irresistible uniqueness of the piece. Its comedy scenes are rich with clever negro fun and the serious side of the play is masterful. It deals with the ever growing problem of producing a nobler set of men, a problem not only of the south but also of the north.

"THE BACHELOR'S BABY."

Those who desire to enjoy a good heavy laugh are promised an opportunity to indulge by witnessing the presentation of Francis Wilson's comedy success, "The Bachelor's Baby," at the Soisson Theatre, Thursday, October 30.

Henry Buckler, a well known comedian, will have the stellar role and will be assisted by a cast of well known and clever players. The part of the baby that causes all the trouble and fun will be played by little Mimi Yvonne, a child that has made one of the greatest plays ever written. Reference is made to "The Spendthrift," by Porter Emerson Browne. This fine four act play will be presented with an admirable cast and production, and judging from advance reports, will be one of the dramatic treats of the season.

JOHN W. BOILEAU PLEADS FOR GREATER CO-OPERATION AMONG COAL OPERATORS, IN STRONG PAPER BEFORE MINING CONGRESS

Importance of the Industry Not Properly Appreciated by Legislators, He Says; Deserves Same Recognition Accorded Agriculture by Federal and State Governments: Urges a Central Legislative Bureau.

From The Weekly Courier.
PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 23.—"What is the Matter With the Mining Industry?" was the subject of the following address delivered this morning by John W. Boileau, the Pittsburgh coal expert, before the American Mining Congress at Philadelphia:
"The trouble with the mining industry is, in the main, the neglect and inattention on the part of the persons engaged in such industry, and particularly that of the members of the various committees at Washington who have to do with mining affairs. They have long neglected it. Last month a Congressman resigned from the Mines and Mining Committee and three other committees in order to become a member of a committee where he expects to get more publicity and a greater prestige.
The mining industry is the second industry in importance in the United States. It has a yearly production of more than two billion dollars as against nine billion claimed for agriculture. This comparison does not give justice to the mining industry, as in the nine billion output claimed for agriculture there are duplications which may reach as high as three or four billion dollars. The Department of Agriculture figures the value of the farm animals after the corn has been fed to them. The figures upon which the output of the mining industry is based, as a rule, show the value of the raw product at the mines.
While the mining industry is the second in importance in this country, it is not generally understood as such. The development of the mines cannot be after agriculture. As a result, agriculture made its claims upon the Federal Government and the various State Governments for aid many years before the mining industry came into recognition as also a fundamental industry. Agriculture as an industry is therefore, better understood, better entrenched and better taken care of. The Federal Government has appropriated nearly $1,000,000 a year for the promotion of agriculture and he states approximately $1,000,000 more for several years.
The Federal Government is giving to the mining industry about $1,000,000 per year and the states much less than this.
In Congress, there is always a number of members who are ready at all times to champion the cause of agriculture.
In Congress there are but few men who understand anything about the mining industry.
In Congress, membership on the Agriculture Committee is considered one of the honors.
In Congress, the Committee on Mines and Mining goes begging for a chairman or for members. This is because of the first remark made in this talk.
The attitude of Congress generally toward the mining industry is in sharp contrast to the industry's importance in the United States. Membership on the Mines and Mining Committee in Parliament is one of the highest honors a member can receive. The best men are selected for this place and a debate on the mining industry serves to bring forth the entire membership. It becomes almost a national issue.
Agriculture with its strong organization and its general recognition throughout the country has grown so rapidly in public favor that its demands for aid from the Federal Government receive recognition and today it is the most subsidized industry on the face of the earth. For every $1.75 worth of product taken from the ground the farmer has received in recent years $1 of Federal aid. Add to this the aid of $1,000,000 per year to this and you will readily see that no industry at any time has ever been subsidized to any such extent.
Agriculture is one of the industries of least hazard. The men who work out in the open air under the sunlight and under the most beautiful conditions.
The mining industry is one of the most hazardous known. In 1912, 1,127 men were killed in coal mines in the United States.
The men work in the dark underground passages, away from the light of day, and are continually surrounded by unknown terrors. They have the deadly gases to contend with, and the even more dangerous coal dust. There is always the danger of a fall of roof, crushing out the lives of men. The miners in the metal mines, in some instances, suffer and languish and die from inhaling stone-dust. There is danger in every phase of the industry.

The mining industry obtains from Congress one-twentieth of the amount of money given to agriculture. According to the figures given out by the Department of Agriculture, that industry is only a little more than four times as large as the mining industry.

Mining is not sufficiently recognized because there is a woeful lack of co-operation throughout the country among those who are engaged in it. As a general rule, the mining man of the West does not know the coal operator of the East; the reverse, of course, is true. This lack of co-operation extends to many of the technical and trade papers. I want to say, an illustration in point: The technical papers, with one or two exceptions, when sent the prospectus of the meeting of the American Mining Congress and Mining Show have failed to exhibit any enthusiasm which would lead to a good meeting. I understand that Secretary Callbreath wrote personal letters to these papers asking editorial comment on both events, outside of two or three, at most three papers, these requests were ignored. Take almost any other industry and its national convention for the year is the greatest event of the year. The papers are filled with advance notices and there is a hurrah and enthusiasm which results in a great attendance. These papers have the men in their own and make it appear that every prominent man in the industry will be present, and this is generally the case.

This spirit of "don't care" seems to pervade the entire industry; even in the regulation, operation and marketing of the output, especially in the marketing end of it, as some operators are operating in the interests of others than the stockholders and bring about selling their coal away at the same price as the coal of a load of dirt. Any co-operative scheme that is started will take the most difficult work before it can be a success. Several of these harmful conditions can be brought about by the awakening of the real owners of the property to the hazardous situation that will result if such policies are continued.

There never seems to be any difficulty in getting the representative farmers together. It is but a short time ago the Farmers' Union held its national convention and resolutions were passed demanding more liberal agricultural appropriations and the establishment of a Bureau of Marketing in the Department of Agriculture, credit extension, stricter immigration laws, etc. These resolutions, as shown, were sent to every member of Congress, and every one took an interest in them. Agriculture has reached a point where it does not ask; it demands. The mining industry begs, and in a pitiful way; and when the beggars ask to have representatives mining men co-operate with them, it is generally but a few of them. Congress soon sees that the appeal does not come from a united industry and it loses interest.

The remedy is a greater, more compact, and more representative organization than the American Mining Congress, but the Mining Congress to be the parent organization with a coal mining and metal mining section. Headquarters of offices in Washington, with a staff capable of taking care of the interests of the industry before Congress and to advise its section members of proposed legislation and the progress of legislation. A closer co-operative spirit among the men engaged in the industry.

A more ready response to the call for help when legislation adverse to the industry is introduced.

An advisory committee that will meet at least twice a year and take up the problems of the industry and in a positive way, and offer suggestions to the convention and the headquarters office in Washington where equally positive influence shall be brought in legislation that will be favorable, considerate, helpful and equitable.

No other industry of any importance whatever is so badly represented in Washington as the mining industry. I am not casting reflections on the secretary of our Mining Congress. He has been endeavoring to maintain an office in Washington, but I do mean that there have been no adequate funds to carry along any fight for the industry. There are industries that are insignificant in proportion to the mining industry that have headquarters in Washington, with an expense account to cover legitimate expenses of maintenance, printing and postage of $25,000 or more per year, and this expenditure is considered an economy.

An illustration of how badly the mining industry is equipped along this line: A year ago, or more, some legislation was introduced which threatened the interests of the oil men in California. This obnoxious legislation passed the House before the oil men were aware that there had been any such legislation under consideration. Two special trains were engaged at great expense by the California operators. The oil men were rushed to Washington, and after ten days strenuous endeavor and the expenditure of considerable money for necessary expense, these men were victorious in blocking this legislation because they were there to point out its oppressive features in a direct way to the legislators who, evidently, did not know how seriously it would affect an important industry.

A permanent headquarters office for the mining industry could have taken care of a similar matter before it had reached the dangerous point and with a fraction of the expense incurred by the California oil men.

The mining men do not seem to realize the magnitude of their own industry. The industry employs more than a million miners; 750,000 are coal miners, and more than 300,000 metal miners. Directly and indirectly connected with this work are 2,500,000 men.

The products of the mines constitute 60% of the freight traffic of the country.

The 250,000,000 tons of coal mined in 1912 would make a solid train of coal-laden cars that would reach around the world without any room for the locomotives to haul them.

In coming to our own state of Pennsylvania, of the entire production of coal in the United States in 1912 Pennsylvania produced practically 15% of the total.

Of the production of coal in the United States during the past five years, the coal mining industry has produced more than 50% of the total tonnage has been mined in the state of Pennsylvania.

This year it will approximate the entire tonnage of Great Britain in volume; and Great Britain is the second coal-producing country of the world.

The total production of coal during 1912 in Pennsylvania equals one-twentieth of all the coal ever produced in the United States and was more than all the other countries of the world, excluding Great Britain and Germany.

Inasmuch as coal is the basis of all industrial activity, why not have the manufacturing interests and the coal interests each, whether it is operating in bricks, iron or steel or any other interest, using fuel, all give their influence and money aid towards establishing a bureau with headquarters at Washington, the second largest industry in the country, agriculture being first and transportation third. With the making of a great industrial center at Pittsburgh, the coal industry has gone on with less attention from the press and individual upholders than any other industrial business that I know of but vast changes must inevitably and with peril to all other industrial and commercial and transportation activities, take place unless order is brought out of the present chaos.

Sent Name and Address Today; You Can Have It Free and Be Strong and Vigorous.

We have in our possession a prescription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened manhood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excessive, unnatural drains, or the tolls of youth, that has cured so many worn and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that we think every man who wishes to regain his manly power, virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So we have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope to any man who will write us for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men and we are convinced it is the greatest acting combination for the cure of debility, manhood and vigor failure ever put together.

We think we owe it to our fellow men to send them a copy in confidence so that any man anywhere who is weak and discouraged with repeated failures may stop dragging himself with harmful patent medicine, secure what we believe is the quickest-acting restorative, apply building. SPOT-TOUCHING remedy ever devised, and so cure himself at home quietly and quickly. Just drop us a line like this: Interstate Remedy Co., 5800 Luck Bldg., Detroit, Mich., and we will send you a copy of this splendid recipe in a plain ordinary envelope free of charge. ## Fashionable Guaranteed FURS

To sell the season through at fair prices—but for less than other stores, who buy in a round about way, must ask. The service of these sterling furs is fully guaranteed against the annoyances common to pelts of uncertain character frequently found in careless establishments. Our furs are modeled along fashionable lines; are perfect in pelt and workmanship; lined with durable, tastefully-toned satins and broadcases, and are given their proper names.

View Them at Close Range

From today, for a little while, fur muffs, neckpieces and sets will come to the front, on the Floor of Fashions, as a courtesy to our patrons for viewing the full selection at close range.

A wonderful collection it is, fraught with intense interest for followers of fashion, for lovers of the luxurious, and for all who have a fine sense of appreciation for things beautiful. Nothing to equal this exposition, or in any way approach it, has been seen in seasons past. It exerts in richness and variety anything that's likely to come later; it loads all former efforts in the exclusiveness of its fashion; it presents fashions hitherto unknown and it has Connellsville's highest standard of reliability back of it.
